LETTER FROM THE EDITORS

Dear Students and Faculty of MVRHS,

It's 2 a.m. the night before the yearbook is due and just like every night for the past week, we are staring at hundreds of unfinished pages, forgotten pictures, and missing links. We have not eaten, slept, or moved from our computers all week. Okay, so maybe this is a slight exaggeration, however, it certainly feels like we may as well move into Room 402 because it has been far too long since we have seen the outdoors.

We started this year ambitiously, with more pages than any yearbook before and an artistically demanding theme. We wanted to create a book that embraced the creativity that pulses through MVRHS and that represented students' individuality. We felt that a large amount of compelling content being presented in a way that embodied the vibrancy and innovation of our generation was critical in setting this book apart from previous ones. Second semester forced us to realize that our content goals were overly ambitious and unrealistic, however could be accomplished with little to no sleep. There were definitely days when we all wanted to quit, or took 'mental health days' that resulted in coming into school anyway and holing up in the photo room with our laptops. Yearbook has been a stress-filled endeavor, however, all those coffee-fueled days sitting in class thinking, "I could be doing yearbook right now", have produced a book filled with creativity, new content, and the best moments of MVRHS this year.

To the students who brushed us off with "yeah, yeah, I'll take my picture later...", we had no choice but to use a picture of you we found on Facebook. To the cooperative students, THANK YOU, you restored our faith in the MVRHS student body. To the faculty, we appreciate you allowing us to take students out of class and for not complaining when we took your pictures. To Mr. Baer and Mrs. Caldwell, thank you for helping us in this endeavor and not telling us we were insane to be so ambitious.

To the entire MVRHS faculty and student body, we hope you can look back at this book in the years to come and appreciate the best times of this year, and laugh at the worst. We took a big risk including so many pages and choosing such an artistically demanding theme, but we think we may just have pulled it off! This book is for you and we hope you love it as much as we do!

LETTER FROM THE PRINCIPAL

High school plays such a vital role in our lives. It's the place where we transition into adults, take our thinking to a higher level, make friendships that may define us, and engage in activities, be it sports or social events like the prom, that will provide lasting memories. For something that provides such impact upon us, it is strange to reflect that this all occurs in the short span of four years.

If you are a freshman reading this book, the remaining three years of your high school career will seem an eternity away. If you are a senior, your thoughts stray towards "where did it go"? If you are a parent, all things regarding your children growing up move at the speed of light.

This book symbolizes memories for some, sets goals and aspirations for others. It locks in time. Your teachers in the book will never grow old and you will remember them just as they were. Mr. Brissette, Mr. and Mrs. Frame, Mr. Dodge, Ms. Callahan, and Ms. Mott (who dedicated many years of her career making this book possible) are all graduating with you this year.

Martha's Vineyard Regional High School is a place of memories and a place of dreams; all that we were and all that we can be, encapsulated in a book. Through time, most of you will come to realize that these, in fact, were the good old days! Good luck to all of you regardless of whether you stand at the beginning or the end of your high school career.

Sincerely,

Dr. Stephen Nixon

RETIRING FACULTY

Keith Dodge

At the age of 35, Keith Dodge was inspired to start teaching and has now been teaching at MVRHS for 26 years. "I was managing restaurants in the Boston area and I always thought I wanted to be a teacher, so I went back to school and got the credits. There was a moment at the restaurant; I was teaching teens to be busboys when a lightbulb went off. I didn't care about other aspects of the job as much as giving people the skills to do their job well. I taught both history and English when I started, and I love them both. I love human culture. I love teaching English literature, British literature and writing. Writing skills are crucial. It's labor intensive, but I can often see students improve over the course of a year. I think that if you can write more clearly, you can think more clearly. They go hand in hand. Writing helps one digest and process one's own feelings and thoughts."

"Be adaptable; growth is change. You have to change to grow. I try to treat students like co-workers, not like little learning machines and treat everyone with respect. Even if some students are reluctant learners, you want them to see that the teacher likes them and has their best interests at heart. This is something that I have learned."

What was one of your favorite moments while at MVRHS? "There have been thousands..... years ago when I was just starting out, I gave a lecture to a C2 class. It was on transatlanticism. A student on the way out said 'thank you' and that it was a good lecture. It was really good to have a kid thank me for my lesson. Positive feedback is what fuels teachers, not a paycheck or a test score, although I like both." "One of my funny stories while teaching are when I had teachers and students from classes next door ask me what was so funny, because they heard us laughing a lot. Laughter in a classroom is wonderful. Education should be fun, some of the time."

Sandy Mott

Sandy Mott has been the librarian at Martha's Vineyard Regional High school for 21 years. She has also had other jobs in her life such as medical transcriptions, sales associate in a pet store, jewelry inspector at Balfour's, and a volunteer lighthouse keeper. "Being a school librarian is the very best."

"After moving from Madison, Wisconsin to Worcester, Massachusetts, my husband and I decided after three years that we did not want to live in Worcester any longer. So, I applied for a number of school librarian jobs including one on Martha's Vineyard. I had only been to the Vineyard on two occasions and living close to the ocean was very appealing to my family and me. The Vineyard schools had a good academic reputation and the environment was friendly and supportive."

"One of the greatest features about being a librarian is that you learn at least one thing everyday." Ms. Mott has been a reference librarian in Wisconsin, a school librarian at a few different Universities, and at a Public Library. "In each type of library there is always something new to learn. One of the more humorous stories come from Worcester Public Library." Working on a reference phone line at the library, she often received calls from local bars where folks would come up with very strange questions they were desperate to have answered. One question asked was: What is the first stanza of the 1955 Kingsmen song Louie Louie? "Fine little girl waits for me. Catch a ship across the sea. Sail that ship about, all alone. Never know if I make it home" Back then, computers were in their infant state and reference questions were harder to answer than they are now. "It was challenging."

There are many stories that Ms. Mott has shared with her colleagues over the years. "Something that sticks in my mind is the day I drove my new car over from Falmouth a few years ago, bragging to my husband that I could be anonymous for at least 2 days before people once again knew my car. As we were driving up Circuit Avenue in Oak Bluffs in early evening, a good friend and colleague, Joy Flanders, burst out of Seasons Restaurant yelling...Sandy! Sandy! My husband was startled as she tapped on my car window pleading with me to join her at the karaoke competition to vote for her. So much for folks not knowing your car and where you were going!"

"Well, how lucky am I! I have plans to go to London with my husband for seven weeks immediately after I retire." When they return, they hope to enjoy a delightful summer on Martha's Vineyard that includes going to the beach every day and having their grand kids go with them on a beach vacation.

"Of course, I will miss my colleagues and all the students. One of the best features of being a teacher is seeing incoming freshman students maturing into seniors, and finally watch them walk across that Tabernacle stage and hopefully onto a wonderful life."

Paul Brissette

Paul Brissette has been a teacher for 33 years. He became a teacher because he didn't want a boring job. When he started teaching at MVRHS in 1978 he got his wish. "Every teaching day is different." Of the 32 years he has been at MVRHS he has taught art and design, and is the department chair, which includes supervising other teachers. "During my tenure I have been instrumental in expanding a single course curriculum/one room facility into an award winning, nationally recognized program with 28 course offerings, seven specialized art, design & computer facilities, and a five instructor department."

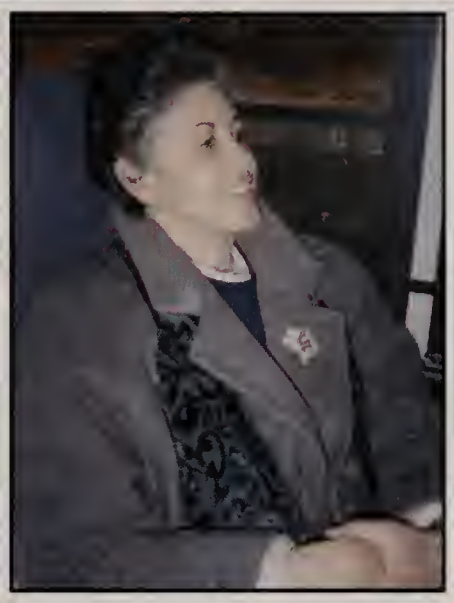
During his three plus decades of teaching, he's taught at the college level: architectural 101 & photography 101. For secondary: all levels of drawing, painting, illustration, 2D design, 3D design, darkroom & digital photography, imaging, set design, and architecture & interior design.

Mr. Brissette earned a MFA from Syracuse University with 30 graduate credits in Architecture and Design in 1990. Before that he graduated from the University of Massachusetts Amherst in 1985 and also earned a BFA from Massachusetts College of Art in 1974. He is certified in Massachusetts K-12 Art Education, Curriculum & Supervision; and is a nationally certified yoga instructor. Other than being one of our art teachers, he was also employed at Leysin American School and Medway Jr.-Sr High School as an art and design instructor.

Mr. Brissette said he has hundreds of funny stories to tell. The one he choose is not one that I would expect to hear. "One day after school I saw a custodian running down the hall towards the exit yelling and screaming with his dust mop on fire. Evidently he had dropped his cigarette into the dry mop and it ignited."

After Mr. Brissette retires he plans on traveling, doing yoga and working on his own artwork.

When I asked him what he would miss the most he replied: "Watching students grow into adults. I have former students working in the art and design fields in every major city in the US. It's a nice feeling."



Leo and Janice Frame

We believe that a true teacher's gift is to guide human discovery, for in truth we can only give what we know for ourselves. The Marthas Vineyard School System for us, has been a sanctuary for patterns of meaningful relationships. These relationships have included students and faculty. We have learned as much from our school environment as we have given.

School honors the good in Mr. Good

By Olivia Jacobs and Olivia Lingren

The school honored Mev Good, a beloved long time high school substitute and World War II veteran, last Friday. This day was pronounced 'Mev Good Day.' A few days before the event, Mr. Good had been told by his wife, Anne, that he was going to the school to deliver a book. Little did he know, a line of students would be waiting in the lobby, ready to honor all Mr. Good has done for the school. As he walked in, some students held up posters for Mr. Good, and as he saw everyone's smiling faces, he became teary eyed. After 10 years of substituting, Mr. Good recently had a fall and was unable to continue coming into the high school. Students and faculty wondered where he was, so this event was held to show just how much everyone had missed him.

As the luncheon began, the floor was open to students and faculty to speak about Mr. Good. Senior Maddie Webster said, "I made my speech, and Mr. Good cried! I interviewed Mr. Good a few years ago, and he still remembered me." After her speech, she received a standing ovation from everyone present at the banquet. Other students and faculty who spoke include history teacher Kate Holter, senior Tjark Aldeborgh, history teacher Elaine Weintraub, and Principal Stephen Nixon.

Elaine Weintraub, head of the history department and a good friend of Mr. Good's, organized the event. "He is a true gentleman with old-fashioned courtesy," said Ms. Weintraub. "He's humorous and cares very deeply about everyone." As a substitute teacher for her classes, he would sometimes talk about his past and being in World War II. Eventually, Mr. Good started to give presentations in all of the history classes.

"Mev has a very old fashioned teaching style. He would just stand there and talk in detail for the whole class," said Ms. Weintraub. "At one of his first presentations, Mev brought in music he used to listen to and started dancing with the girls in the class. They loved it." The students always listened intently and gave positive feedback.

Senior Bella Bennett volunteered to go to the banquet. onable guy, and it was really fun to get to know him over the three years that we were at the high school together. He brought so much to every class. Mr. Good gained the respect of every class, sharing stories from his past or handing out really interesting true-or-false quizzes that he made about life. It helped to make the history that I was learning in class more realistic."

Maddie said, "He's so loved because he's adorable and passionate. Mev helped me learn to love parts of history I didn't find interesting, like the War of 1812, by introducing music to the curriculum."

As the luncheon came to a close, Mr. Good sat at the head of the table. All of the students sat around him, listening intently to his stories, asking questions, and telling him how much they missed his presence in the school.

After being asked how he felt about the banquet, Mr. Good said, "It's very overwhelming. I am so grateful and was brought to tears. I want to thank everyone: Ms. Weintraub, Chef O'Malley, and all of the students."

Said Ms. Weintraub, "Mev gives us something you can't get anywhere else. History can seem so distant. When Mev comes in, he brings it to life."

Seniors Maddie Webster and Bella Bennett hug Mr. Good as he enters the high school to attend what he believes is a quick errand. Instead, the high school is celebrating Mev Good Day. To show their appreciation for Mr. Good, students and faculty held a luncheon in the high school's Culinary Arts dining room.

Prejudice explored in retreat

BY LILY BICK

Instead of learning about trig functions and World War I last week, some students were given cultural shocks at the ninth annual Race-Culture Retreat. They were excused from class on November 27 and 28 to go to the Y for the retreat. They discussed their racial backgrounds, their own prejudices, and the prejudices they have endured. Students were nominated by teachers to attend the retreat based on leadership skills and backgrounds.

The retreat focuses on raising awareness of discrimination within the high school. Students and teachers take part in discussions about sometimes controversial topics. The retreat strives on participation and contributions from each student. Said Amy Lilavois, school adjustment counselor, "I was particularly impressed with the level of engagement among the students this year."

As a group, students read Langston Hughes' "I, Too, Sing America," a poem that exemplifies diversity and encourages the appreciation of different cultures. The group discussed the poem in a way that encouraged voices to speak out about their opinions. Said junior Isahel Smith, "The big group gives you a look into other people's lives that you would never assume if you didn't meet them outwardly." Students played games that encouraged trust and openness in the group like personal scavenger hunts and group problem-solving activities.

Some students who have participated in previous years were asked to return as student facilitators. They led discussions, provided insight, and shared stories about their lives. Said senior and student facilitator Maggie Riseborough, "Everyone becomes so comfortable and they can really be open to each other. It's a really good bonding experience."

For students who were intimidated or afraid to talk within the large group, dynamic, smaller "homegroups" offered a more comfortable and private environment. Students shared personal stories about being victimized and victimizing. Said junior Emelia Cappelli, who went on the retreat, "I liked the little group because it got more personal."

While the retreat is mostly student-run, teachers also participated. Said guidance director and adult facilitator of the retreat Michael McCarthy, "I complete all the logistics of the retreat, but the students run it. I especially felt that the kids were very open with rich discussion about hard topics."

The retreat harbors dynamic discussion, evolving to accommodate what the students want to discuss. Topics this year covered a range of controversial issues, including race, women's issues, and sexuality.

Ms. Lilavois has observed discrimination and prejudice within the high school. She said, "There's a lot more discrimination than people talk about. A lot of it is said in a joking way, but I love race-culture because it puts kids on alert. Now they might step up and stop someone who's picking on a person instead of laughing."

Like the discussion, the retreat itself is a dynamic thing. In its nine years, the retreat has evolved to suit the needs of the community. This year a new element was added. Said Mr. McCarthy, "We looked at the impact of the lyrics of songs on different people. It was very charged."

One activity that the students do in their home group is the "strength bombardment." Said Maggie, "I love the strength bombardment. You go through each person in your group and tell them what you appreciate about them and their contribution to the group. It was really nice."

Vice principal Andrew Berry has attended the retreat in the past, and has worked in schools in Washington, D.C. that had diverse student bodies. As a result, he has undergone a lot of diversity training in the past. "We are a multicultural country," he said. "The retreat is getting people to the level of appreciation beyond tolerance and seeing how it adds richness to your life. That's valuable here because of the isolated life on the Island."

The retreat extends to all parts of the school as students return to the high school. Many of the students who participated in the retreat left with a sense of openness and satisfaction. Said history teacher and retreat facilitator Kate Holter, "Students at the retreat were so honest and insightful. It would be impressive to see them bring the same compassion that they had at the retreat into the school and express it with their friends."

The History Club is an informal group that gathers once a week to learn more about history outside of the classroom. All Martha's Vineyard Regional High School students are welcome to join. Club activities have included guest speakers, collaboration with the Dukes County Museum and the Dukes County Court House, visits to local historical homes, watching historically themed movies, the occasional debate, and a yearly field trip to a historical locale.

KENDO

Kendo, the "Way of the Sword", is the Japanese sport of fencing. Tracing its roots back to feudal-era samurai, it involves two fencers to spar with bamboo practice swords known as shinai. As a sport, it requires discipline, honor, and respect.

The MVRHS Kendo club was founded to impart these values upon the student body and to increase cultural diversity in the school. For a tiny island in America, an experience that will expose students to a foreign sport and mindset should be beneficial. Future hopes for the club include tournaments in Boston and on island, so that club members can meet other Kendo enthusiasts!

YOUNG BROTHERS TO MEN

Young Brothers is a group of students who devote themselves to charity. We create and coordinate events in the high school to raise money and food for those in need.

TRAVELS ABROAD

I think we can all get bored on this little island. We can all become complacent and stagnant, and when that happens we need to find new ways to challenge ourselves and explore our interests. Most people find something, whether it be in sports, theater, art or academics. I just went a little farther away to find my challenge.

I spent the second semester of junior year as an exchange student in Argentina. I lived in a small city called San Nicolas de los Arroyos in the northern plains region of the country, about four hours outside of the capital, Buenos Aires. I stayed with a local family and attended a local Spanish-speaking school.

Before going to live with my host family, I spent a week with a dozen other exchange students in the beautiful neighboring city of Rosario. Going into Rosario from the airport I saw my first villas, what Argentines call the fields of crammed together metal boxes and wooden shacks that border most cities. In the villas, houses are almost indiscernible from the trash that surrounds them. San Nicolas was much smaller than Rosario, the streets were filled with stray dogs and piled with litter, every window was barred or broken or both, and people were robbed all of the time. I was robbed once, walking with a group of friends not far from my host families house, near a villa. A boy probably younger than me knocked me down grabbed my purse, and ran off. Needless to say the transition from Martha's Vineyard was jarring. I had always considered myself to be a globally aware and conscientious person, but experiencing the way that other people live is far different than reading about it.

Argentina was a whole new world, a world that, quite frankly, I wasn't ready for. My spanish was basic at best and I had the misfortune to be thrown into a host family that was not particularly kind to me or anyone else. I don't regret it though; I knew what I was doing when I left and I am so much stronger for it now. I am stronger for the ostracization I faced and the poverty I saw. I learned so much and I am so much more driven because of it. It was beautiful and enlightening because, and not in spite, of the fact that it was so hard. During those five months I felt abandoned and discovered, I felt helpless and powerful.

-Carter D'Angelo

At some point in adolescence, we all dream of running away. I was lucky enough to actually fulfill this dream. From February to June 2012, I lived on the southwest coast of France. Wine was served with dinner. Everyone rode Vespas. Cool kids smoked cigarettes as if I was thrown in a time machine to the 90s. Biarritz, part of the Aquitaine, was a beautiful seaside town, 15 minutes away from the border of northern Spain. I fell in love with this town. Bayonne, the neighboring city, was a whirlwind of cobblestone streets, skateboarders, and bohemians. As a 17-year-old American girl, I think escaping to France for four months was a beautiful experience.

-Aoife Estes

For two months of the coldest European winter ever, I was living in Dieppe, Haute Normandie (High Normandy), France. Dieppe is a seashore village and large shipping port. Here I lived with a family in the center of town and attended the high school. Being the largest high school in High Normandy, of 1500 students, it was a big change from MVRHS. I took all the required classes and was some days in class until 5:30 PM.

The really loved the town- it was quaint as could be with many cafes and bakeries. We were two and a half hours away from Paris but actually went quite often. My French mother owned a kids' fashion shop in town and several times I found myself in Paris' fashion scene helping her choose next season's clothes! Never the less, shopping and walking around the city of Paris was quite fabulous. The Champs-Elysees during Christmas and New Year's was quite spectacular in the holiday decorations! I really loved the old architecture of the cities and even the countryside had the homes and churches one imagines in stories. My most favorite building was the old castle of Dieppe (just up the road from my townhouse and down the street from the school). Le Chateau de Dieppe looked over the sea and you can see it from down in the village. Supposedly when the Germans invaded Dieppe in 1942 the castle was the only building left standing and it doubled as a hospital for the citizens and military headquarters.

Overall my adventure in France was well worth the frigid winter. I learned the language of love, and a lot about myself. I enjoyed the exposure to a different culture and, of course, the incredible food!

-Paris Bermudes

EXCHANGE STUDENT

Clara Hernandez Hamburger

Clara is an exchange student coming from Brazil. She is staying with a family who is a friend of her dad. Her dad did the same thing when he was a kid, and stayed with her host mom's family.

Clara picked Martha's Vineyard because she thought it seemed like a really pretty and unique place. A new environment was exciting! She loves how you can choose classes, and that there are new people in each class. In Brazil, you are in a class with the same people all the time. Clara says American candy is so much better!

Overall, Clara wanted to see how life was in different parts of the world. She lived in Spain when she was a child and visited America years ago. She wanted an experience that she can't get in a vacation. Clara couldn't be more grateful for this opportunity and enjoyed her time!

What some MVRHS kids would do

WHEN THEY COME.

"I'd probably open a zombie exclusive restaurant that serves only high end human for those rich fancy zombies. I'd make a mean brain like you wouldn't believe. And then the zombies wouldn't eat me cause they'd be like: "This guy makes a damn good fried femur, we should keep him around."-Avery Lazes

"I'd buy a shotgun and sit on my porch all day in my rocking chair." -Natty Schneider

"Start building weapons and load up on food, hike up a big mountain with a large protective dog and live in the woods"-Dylan Brockmeyer

"Try to become a zombie."-Jenny Hart

"Buy lots of walnuts"-Taylor McNeely

"Sail away to some crazy island where there were no zombies."-Ian Bardwell

"Build an epic tree house with a zip line system and live there with all my favorite people"-Paris Bermudes

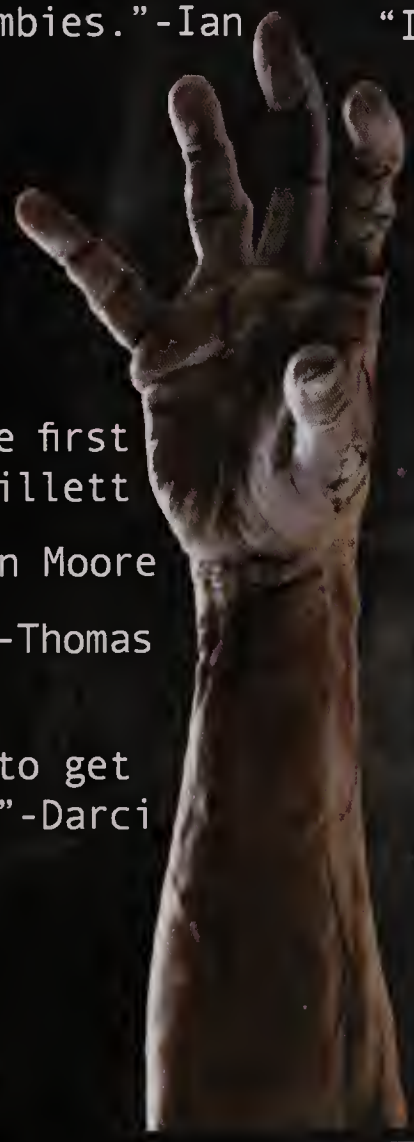
I would probably be the first to die- Alexis Faith Willett

"Move to mexico"-Gordon Moore

"I'd build a fortress"-Thomas Wilkins

"I'd definitely need a to get a pair of rollerskates"-Darci Whitney

"Run."-Mikey Schroeder



"I would probably embrace the zombie lifestyle but first travel somewhere tropical... I would also find a babeski zombie wife."-Ben Dwane

"Find a group of humans and hide somewhere until it was safe. Or kill myself. The last part sounds suicidal... Might not want to add that." -Mikayla Tinus

"Go find a redneck with some guns"-Russell Shapiro

"I'd probably do everything I've always wanted to do in life as fast as I could."-Nicole Parkhurst

"Get Kent Leonard."- Patrick McCarthy

"I'd have to watch the movie Zombie land and go use his rules of survival."-Sydney Davies

"I would take a nap."-Brandon Dwane

"I would grab whatever lethal object I had, gather all camping and self sustenance gear I had, raid a store for more necessary supplies, steal a bigger vehicle, like a suburban or escalade, and kick ass as long as I could show no mercy with a sawed off shot gun and a M1911"-Benjamin Lukowitz

Team exacts revenge against Wareham; defeats Danvers

By Julia Cooper

While the Vineyarders lost to Danvers (SCORE) on Tuesday, they earned an incredible victory over Wareham on Saturday in order to make it to the Division 3 State Semi-Finals at the TD Banknorth Garden.

While the Vineyarders' victory over Danvers propelled the team to the Division 3 State Finals at the DCU Center on Saturday, it was an incredible and improbable victory on the previous Saturday that catapulted them into the Semi-Finals.

The game's result was a 77-71 victory for the Vineyarders over the top-seeded Wareham Vikings. This result devastated Wareham's 22 game winning streak.

Said first-time basketball game attendee, senior Ryan Sawyer, "I wanted to go to the game because it was a big game for our team and school; I was happy to see such a big turnout from our fans." In fact, more than 150 fans attended the game and were transported on three busses paid for by the MV Hoops Club.

As the busses began their convoy to UMass-Boston, students napped, listened to music, and chatted with their peers. Said sophomore Luke McCracken regarding an unexpected stop at Burger King, "If honding over fried food in the morning doesn't say dedication to school spirit, then I don't know what does."

The Vineyard fans arrived at UMass-Boston in full spirit attire. Some sported tee shirts with a graphic saying "Beat Wareham," while others wore purple outfits and purple face paint. A dedicated Tony Breth even painted his entire body purple. Said senior girls' basketball player Jennie Lindland, "The custom shirts were a great touch and it really made a difference to the team."

The team hoists the MIAA D-3 south-sectional final trophy after beating Wareham last Saturday. The score was 77-71.

The rivalry between the Vineyard and Wareham was evident from the beginning as the game stayed close for its duration. Said senior captain and point guard Jack Roberts after the game, "We were all really excited to play today because Wareham beat us in that game last year. We came out playing really strong and played as a team, which is something that was a lot harder to do during the beginning of the season."

Last year, these two teams met in the finals and Wareham began with a lead of 21-3.

The Vineyard spirit was evident from the tip-off, as the stands constantly erupted in cheers. Said freshman Sara Poggi, "I was really impressed with the amount of people that came to support the Vineyard team because the school's fans are very energetic and loud and great at cheering."

Said senior center Liam Weston, "We really needed that first half. We came out strong and didn't let their talent make us nervous. We didn't crumble and we played the defenses that our coach set up successfully. We did what we needed to do."

At half time, the Vineyarders held a 43-36 lead.

"It was a two-point game for so long," said freshman Nate D'Angelo. "The teams were going back and forth with the lead and I could hardly contain my excitement."

Before the start of the tense fourth quarter, the Vineyard fans overpowered Wareham's cheerleaders with a round of the call-and-response cheer, "I Believe," which concludes with fans jumping while shouting "I believe that we will win," in rapid succession.

Said junior Aaron Lowe, "My favorite part, other than when we won, was when Navardo dunked over Darien Fernandez. It was absolutely insane."

Senior Navardo Anderson made two dunks for the Vineyard, pushing them towards their victory. One dunk was made dramatically over Wareham's leading scorer, Darien Fernandez. The dunk put the Vineyard in the lead 62-61, and was quite clearly a crowd pleaser. But after Izak Browne received a technical foul for throwing an elbow after the play, Wareham began a run.

Wareham took the lead with a score of 67-64 with 4:07 left in the game, but to this, the Vineyarders had an answer. Junior Kane Araujo came off the bench to score a crucial 3-point shot to tie the game at 67. It was then that two free throws from Liam Weston brought the Vineyard back to lead 69-67.

Wareham was able to tie the game once more at 69, but the Vineyard team was able to regain the lead with a score of 73-69 after Navardo's fast break, second dunk and two foul shots. The final score was 77-71 Vineyard.

Vineyard scoring was led by senior captain Izak Browne with 17 points, junior Deshawn James with 15 points, Jack Roberts with 11 points and Navardo Anderson with 11 points.

After the game, senior Carl Gosselin said, "This is the greatest moment of my life as a Vineyard fan. That was an amazing game, with an amazing turnout that led to an amazing victory."

Reflecting on his whole experience at the game, senior Brandon Watkins said, "The most exciting moment for me was when the clock hit triple-zero."

New York group returns

By Marc Natichioni

Three thousand students from around the world, including 16 from regional high school, gathered in New York City for the National High School Model United Nations (NHSMUN). Students from South America, Europe, Australia, and all over North America came together to debate important world issues.

The Vineyarders departed last Wednesday morning and returned late Friday night. Through their interest in debate and political issues that face countries all around the world, the students were able to greater understand the perspectives of their peers.

Mathematics teacher Marylee Carlomagno, Spanish teacher Jessica Bertucci, and parent chaperone Michele Ortlip accompanied the students on the trip.

For most students this experience was much more than just a trip to NYC. Senior Kevin Burchill, who acted as Co-Secretary General to the club, took home an Award of Merit from the International Court of Justice where he acted as a representative. He said, "It was self-assuring because it showed me that the hard work that I had put in for the conference had paid off. It was surprising for the large number of top students competing for such recognition."

For four of the seven seniors attending, it was their fourth and final trip. While junior Nathaniel Horwitz was in the Council of the European Union, working on solving the Eurozone debt crisis, he said, "We as a council ended up passing a proposal for refinancing up to 60 percent of struggling nations' debt on condition that they imposed certain austerity measures and tax cuts."

For all the students this academic trip had much to offer including meeting people from around the world while trying to overcome language barriers and cultural difference.

Said senior Annabelle Hackney, "Martha's Vineyard is such a specific type of culture, so experiencing cultures from all around the world while working through global issues was an eye-opening and exciting experience."

Jeremy is just a regular school kid with a whole lot of swag, and is always sure to keep his S.O.F.A. (Swag on full attack.) His main concerns in life are learning and running. Running is something Jeremy loves to do because he can do it anywhere and he can wear some pretty awesome short-shorts. He does cross country in the fall which, according to him probably the best sport in the world. "My favorite part of cross country is the swag manchester trip where we go to New Hampshire for three days and hunt unicorns, mammoths, and saber tooth tigers." says Jeremy. "Back on island we sell our unicorn hides for a good profit that lasts us most of our school year until our next hunting excursion." Jeremy also runs Track, and is scared of books.

When Madeline eventually grows up, she wants to be a rockstar. Since she is still in highschool, however, she says that Spongebob marathons and mudpies are pretty fun too. In her spare time, (when she is not eating crumpets and drinking tea with the Queen), Madeline enjoys playing the drums and dying her hair. She moved to Martha's Vineyard last year from France, and before that she lived in England, which is where she was born. She loves listening to music and going to concerts. "I dislike sports, onions, and people that do bad imitations of my accent," says madeline, "But feel free to do it anyway because it makes me laugh." If there was one thing Madeline would like to share to the MVRHS school body, it is that mayonnaise is not an instrument!

She likes to sing and make cupcakes and she's fluent in English. And she does love her twin.

Avery was born on June 28th, 1996 and is left handed. He was born in Long Island, New York and moved to Martha's Vineyard when he was only four years old. In his free time, he likes to snuggle with his eleven cats, play bass with his band, cook elaborate food, chill with friends, play video games, watch Netflix, and drink coffee. Ever since he was in seventh grade, Avery has chosen to eliminate meat from his diet. If you ask him why, he will simply tell you to go watch the documentary "Earthlings" and then you too will chose to become a vegetarian. If you wish to become Avery's friend, you will have no problem doing so. All you have to do is bake him a nice batch of cookies and compliment his goatee. He is too kind to reject any friendship, and will appreciate you for who you are.

Violence erupts on stage

By Jason Gruner

Several regional high school students won Excellence in Acting Awards from the Massachusetts Educational Theater Guild (METG) last Saturday. The accolades were presented following the organization's preliminary festival round held at Attleboro High School. Senior Taylor McNeely and junior Sam Permar both won awards for Excellence in Acting. In addition, the entire cast of the play was honored by host school Attleboro's acting troupe with an Outstanding Concept Award for their play, "Reflections."

The play was co-written by theater teacher Kate Murray, senior Sarahrae Gruner, with contributions from students in the Theater II class "Reflections" explores the dark and troubled life of a character named Rue, played by senior Nicole Parkhurst.

The festival competition has three levels--preliminary, semi-finals, and state finals. This year, 115 one-act plays produced by high school students from across Massachusetts participated in the preliminary round

"The competition was not only a friendly encounter with other schools acting programs, but also a great learning experience," said junior Sarah Dawson

Throughout the play, Rue is constantly decoding what is real and what isn't. Her gradual decent into madness devolves into what appears to be a murderous and self-destructive spiral--although the exact the distinctions between what is real and what is not remain compellingly ambiguous. Rue, a middle-aged woman, struggles to maintain her hold on reality after her mother, Grace, dies. The months pile on during which her behavior towards her family becomes increasingly violent. More troubles occur as Rue begins to recognize, at times, that much of what she feels is the truth of her life is actually an illusion.

The cast of the original play "Reflections" convene in their preparation room in Attleboro High School shortly before they went on stage to perform in the METG high school theater festival last Saturday.

Rue believes that her family, especially her mother, had always favored her husband Frank, played by sophomore Josh Boucher, over her. Jealousy radiated throughout Rue's consciousness, now that her mother has departed she feels that she will have Frank all to her herself. Her family will give her more attention and she will be happier. As the months press on, Rue's suppressed emotions only have been emboldened by her mother's death. She dishes out to her family sharp passive aggressive statements, and exhibits a general, detached state of being. Rue feels powerless and thinks that her family members act as though they are a clique operating against her

Said sophomore and make-up designer Kayla Goldman, "It was a really great experience, regardless of the outcome. The whole cast and crew put so much time into this show, and I'm glad I got to be a part of this amazing experience again."

Josh said, "It was really difficult rehearsing along with "Secret Garden," but day after day it all started to come together and it all worked out in the end."

Whenever Rue hears something she might not like--especially regarding her mother's home--she becomes increasingly indignant. When Rue's niece Aria, played by junior Sarah Parece, talks about moving furniture in Grace's home, Rue's anger increases. As Rue's behavior isolates her more and more from her family, it also isolates her from self awareness. Meanwhile her friend Aidan, played by Sam Permar, becomes her only shelter in her mental storm since he listens to her and tries to help her heal. As Rue's jealousy of her sister Cassandra played by junior Sarah Dawson, grows, she considers committing increasingly horrific acts of violence.

Stage manager senior Carl Gosselin said, "I'm so proud of the cast and all of the work they put into this show. They delivered a great performance."

While the challenges of creating a production for the festival were intense, Taylor said, "This year was great because everyone pitched in and made sure that the play was the best it could be. We didn't move on, but there was a feeling of accomplishment because we'd defeated every crisis and came out on the other side with the respect of both our peers and ourselves."

Theater teacher Betsy Hauck directed the show.

Violinist invited to play at Symphony Hall

By Thorpe Karabees

For the first time in almost ten years, a student from the regional high school was invited to play violin in the All-State Music Festival Orchestra at Symphony Hall in Boston. Junior Sarah Ortlip-Sommers traveled to Boston on Thursday to rehearse and play a concert on Saturday night. The accomplishment represents the culmination of many years' worth of practice and a musical career milestone.

Sarah Ortlip-Sommers (top row, center) plays second violin at Symphony Hall in Boston on Saturday afternoon. She was the first instrumentalist in 10 years from the regional high school to be invited by the Massachusetts Music Educators Association to play in the All-State Music Festival.

The three-day long rehearsal process, which began on February 28th, was far from new to Sarah. She has participated in the Southeastearn District Music Festivals since seventh grade. She attended the Soundfest Quartet Institute, a two-week-long summer music program, for five years, and she was the concertmaster of the Cape Cod Youth Symphony Orchestra for two years. She also was the concertmaster of the All-Cape Orchestra for the past two years and continues to rehearse every Sunday with the Boston Youth Symphony Orchestra's (BYSO) Repertory Orchestra, which performed the day after the All-State Music Festival's concert.

"It's definitely made me a better violinist playing with such accomplished players and playing sophisticated music," Sarah said. "As tough as it is to spend all the time and make the effort, the experience of playing in a full symphony orchestra is worth it."

Earlier this year, Sarah was principal second violinist of the Southeast District Orchestra. A recommendation from this, given to the top half of students in each district, earns a performer a chance to audition for the All-State Festival. MVRHS students have made it to the All-State Music Festival before. Regional high graduate Sidra Dumont accomplished the feat two years ago.

"I think certainly the school string programs have contributed to Sarah's love of the violin," said her mother Michele Ortlip. "Without the support of the school program, this would not have been possible. We are grateful to Mr. Tinus for his direction and positive reinforcement as the director of the school orchestra. The same holds for his wife, Rebecca Barca-Tinus, who has been Sarah's violin teacher for six years."

Sarah does not try out for orchestras because the music festivals are fun and quick; the festival and BYSO rehearsals can be affairs that take up most of the day and a significant deal of a young musician's time.

Although Sarah, at the moment, does not want to go into a violin career, she is thinking about minoring in music in college. "Violin is more than a hobby; it has been part of my life since I was a little kid," said Sarah. "Music is something I want to continue for the rest of my life."

Inhale

Annabelle Hackney

My food consumption is not a reflection of how I feel about your body's decomposition.

Your charred two pack-a-day lungs, are too damaged to inhale, which leaves you with a heart too slow to pump blood to your muscles, and your muscles too weak to slide open your jaw.

Since your jaw cannot unhinge, food cannot access your yellow teeth, which pulverize your meal into mushy nutrition and send it down an ashy esophaghus.

It would eventually reach a hungry stomach that has not seen a morsel in three weeks, and the animal scratching inside would subside and mend your broken body.
However, you are too weak to open your mouth, because there's no blood, you lie and remember.

His dried-out-to-grey eyes
Twitched to the beat
Of his rusty heart.

With mud-lined fingernails,
He scratched at his scales,
Grating the epidermis.
Shedding,
Rolling drops of sweat off of his widow's peak,
To fertilize the tar.
A film of plaque,
A barrier between his cracked and bloody lips
And cavernous teeth,

Was occasionally peeled back by his taste buds.

But as he walked by the man covered in the drip
Of women not his wife,
He could hear the clash of change in his pockets.

Alice

Elizabeth

Greene

Alice was born in Boston Hospital at a tiny 3 pounds, 4 ounces. She is one of six, two sisters and three brothers. Her favorite classes include Crafts and Sculpture with Mr. Coogan and Photography with Mr. Baer. "I love doing photo shoots" she said, "encouraging people to reach outside their comfort zones." Alice loves going to thrift shops (she's "gonna pop some tags") and inventing unusual outfits. She also secretly loves going through other people's family photo albums. She loves nude beaches. Her favorite movies include Rocky and Splash. Alice's favorite food is lobster and Twizzlers. She is fond of manatees and bisons. One of Alice's greatest fears would be to burn alive. After high school she wants to build a tee-pee and spend the rest of her life with best friend, Zachary Smalley. She is very thankful for the support of Zac Smalley in her life. She also wants to hike the Grand Canyon with a child in tow.

Jack

Roberts

Some might know him as class valedictorian, captain or Cupcake, but to most he's just Pope John A. Roberts III, an outstanding teammate, student and young man. He has become captain on all his teams and plans to continue playing baseball in college at Williams. He has achieved numerous EAC All-star awards. "The dedication and motivation that comes from playing a sport has crossed over into the academic part of my life. If you put in the time then the results will show," said Jack. US History has been his favorite area of academics. With this wide skill set it seems reasonable for Jack to want to study law in college. Until eighth grade, he went on family trips to California. They'd play golf and tennis and visit Pebble Beach; these yearly trips are Jack's fondest memories. Jack believes the most important things in life are family and success, which both seem to be already in his grasp. As Julia Cooper put it, "No matter how well he does, he always wants to do better."

Bailey

"For the longest time, I have always classified myself as an animal among humans. I've swam with dolphins, I've held falcons in my hands and I've stood inches away from some of the largest creatures on earth. But I have always felt more welcome amoung beasts than with people. So I walk and talk like a beast, and that's just who I am, and nothing will ever change that. So if there is one lesson I can pass on to my followers of MVRHS it would be: no matter what, just be who you are, individual and proud. No matter what, be proud of who you are." Words of Cord Bailey

Alayna

Louise

Hutchinson

Alayna Huchinson plays soccer, basketball and lacrosse. In her rare moments of free time, Alayna likes to sew clothes, paint and draw. She mentioned she would miss Janice Frame and the art room as a whole, and gym class. She enjoys The Vampire Diaries: coincidentally, the main character is named Alayna. She has two purrrfect cats. Her favorite poem is "I carry your heart with me" by e.e. Cummings, while musically she is "really into Mumford and Sons right now." In general, she "honestly likes all types of music, including country!" Her favorite food is toast and sour patches. She hopes to go to college either in North Carolina or Boston, but is leaning toward some place warm. With interests in the sciences, chemisty specifically, she is thinking about focusing on chemical engineering. She loves both being in her room and spending a summer day out on the beach, especially Philbin's. "Summer may seem cliché," Alayna says, "but it really is the best thing about the island... and the close proximity of friends."

SENIOR PROFILES

Samantha Valley

Michel Filipe

Ribeiro

Sam Valley was born an islander. She takes part in Minnesingers, Art Club, and the Twerk Squad. English is her favorite class; Mr. McCarthy is her "favorite teacher in the whole world." She loves spending her afternoons in Janice Frame's room. After school, Sam either goes to work at the Scottish Bakehouse, hangs out with friends, or paints at home. After MVRHS, Sam wants to become an art therapist in expressive therapy and psychology. She also watches a lot of scary movies with Maggie Riseborough. She likes eating latkes, pomegranates and gummy worms, but not necessarily all at once. Her favorite animals are her dog, Bailey, and elephants, however, she has an unexplainable fear of pigeons. She said her favorite quote is "Some things are of more than ordinary significances." Sam will miss her friends from MVRHS next year.

Mateus Ribeiro

Mateus Ribeiro was born in Mantenopolis, Brazil. He now lives in Vineyard Haven with his 11 year-old brother, Lucas. He says although his family is from Brazil, his ancestors immigrated there from Italy and Portugal. He is currently thinking of becoming an engineer. His dream is to go to college and become successful in whatever he decides to do. Mateus plays the bass guitar. In school, Mateus is part of the Jazz Band and Philosophy Club. He also likes to watch and play soccer and play untimate frisbee. His favorite movie is 50/50 and his favorite television show is Peep Show. Mateus likes Brazilian, Italian, Mexican, and American food. He says his favorite candies are Jolly Ranchers. When asked what his favorite part of the island was, he responded: "How different life is here compared to the rest of the country." He will miss the friends he's made here.

The High School View is staffed and prepared entirely by students from the Martha's Vineyard Regional High School, and published on their behalf by The Martha's Vineyard Times, with the generous assistance of the sponsors whose names appear below

Art and literary magazine breezes through competition

By Chris Aring-Sharkovitz

This is the cover of the award-winning issue of Seabreezes, designed by senior Samantha Valley.

For the first time in the regional high school's history, the student literary magazine Seabreezes won the highest award for excellence in the entire state of Massachusetts. The award, sponsored by the National Council of Teachers of English, is given annually to recognize superior achievement in writing, art, photography, graphic design, and editing.

Art teacher Janice Frame and English teacher Bill McCarthy served as the magazine's faculty advisers. Seniors Clare Boland and Charlotte Hall were the two editors in chief. This year Clare and Charlotte continue to be editors-in-chief along with senior Carter D'Angelo. Said Charlotte, "I was extremely happy, shocked really, when I found out."

Mrs. Frame said, "I was elated. It was the biggest award we've ever won." The award sets a high a standard of achievement for the new members of the magazine's editorial staff. Students who join now will see what previous students achieved and that will inspire others to produce work at the highest levels.

The Seabreezes editing staff of advisers and students selects the best works from the hundreds of pieces that are submitted each year. They try to pick pieces from all grades in order to represent the entire school. They choose from genres including art, photography, poetry, essays, stories, and more. Typically, art and English teachers encourage their students to submit work for consideration.

"When I heard about the award, I ran straight to my editors and thanked them for their hard work," said Mr. McCarthy. "I liked seeing their faces light up and feel a sense of accomplishment when I told them. I was grateful to everyone who constructed it. It's a place where creative pieces can be rewarded and seen by many."

Said superintendent Jim Weiss, "The MVRHS Literary magazine has always received some type of award in this competition; however, this year it received top honors as the #1 magazine in the state. Outstanding and well-deserved. I continue to be impressed with the work of our students and the leadership of our faculty."

Students interested in submitting work to Seabreezes or in serving on its staff should contact Mr. McCarthy, Mrs. Frame, Charlotte Hall, or Clare Boland.

Senior Kyle Joba-Woodruff and junior Julian Kelly have founded an unofficial intramural Ultimate team. Last Saturday, the organized game of Ultimate reached a record-breaking attendance of over 20 participants. The student's unofficial intramural Ultimate team meets regularly in Veteran's Field Saturdays at one in the afternoon. All students, parents, and passers by are welcome to join in the game.

Nursing education planned for high school curriculum

By Olivia Jacobs

Starting next fall, a nursing course will be offered to MVRHS students as a vocational-education elective. Initially, it will be geared toward freshmen who choose to participate in the vocational program. As it is gradually integrated into the high school, more advanced courses will be offered to upperclassmen. The goal is for the program to be fully functioning within three to four years.

Mr. Rothwell, Director of the Career and Technology Education "vocational/mentorship" program, said, "There is a real need for trained workers in the hospital. In the summer, the hospital ends up hiring 'travelers,' nurses who travel to many different hospitals. The hospital has to pay for their housing. This program hopes to train local students who will go on to become trained, licensed nurses with good-paying jobs."

Ninth-grader Samantha Hargy said,"I think that the nursing program would really benefit our school. I would be interested in taking the program next year. It sounds really fun."

Mr. Rothwell spoke of the challenges in bringing this program to the high school. He said, "We don't have a teacher for the program yet. It will be a challenge to find one because it's only a part-time job, and we want a professional. Also, we will need funding from Chapter 74, which provides federal and state money to help with the funds needed for the program. A lot of the teaching equipment, like the x-ray materials, will be expensive."

On Tuesday, January 8th, a meeting was held at MVRHS by Cape Cod Community College (CCCC) for Martha's Vineyard residents interested in taking nursing courses at the college. Some attendees were already nursing assistants, but most were looking to start their healthcare careers. While no high school students attended the meeting, the CCCC program director is working closely with Mr. Rothwell to launch the nursing program at the high school. This will make it easier for students taking the high-school course to move on in their nursing career.

Mrs. MacDonald, guidance counselor, explained the program's origin. She said, "There was a lot of talk about bringing a nursing program into the high school since there is a lot of need for nursing on the Island. Every year, Windemere Nursing and Rehabilitation Center leaves one spot open in their training classes for a high school student over the age of 17. We would like to have more classes in this field."

Mr. Rothwell said, "I hope this program will open up all of the career options for the students. Any student interested in the health field should take this class."
